

WANTED: STORE CO-MANAGER!

Are you a grocery/food nerd looking for something new and unique? Do you go into grocery stores and think – “I would have displayed these items differently or carried a different mix of products”? Perhaps you’re tired of corporate bosses and feel like your creativity is being stifled. Perhaps you’re interested in real food, grown on real local farms, sold by real people. Perhaps you’d really like to have an authentic connection to your community of customers – one based on a genuine relationship and not on faceless transactions.

We have a job for you! Our Table Cooperative is looking for a full-time store co-manager for our on-farm grocery store in Sherwood, Oregon. Just 15 miles south of Portland, our 60-acre farm grows a large variety of organic vegetables and fruit. As a farm cooperative, we source the things we don't grow on our own farm from other Oregon farmers and food artisans who share our ethics and commitment to quality. Your job will be to co-lead a team of staff working closely with growers, distributors, and customers to execute a complete strategy for the cooperative’s retail operations.

The farm store and attached commercial kitchen offer a full range of mostly organic and mostly Oregon-sourced groceries year-round. At an everyday level, your job will involve sourcing a curated range of grocery items, co-managing a team of storekeepers, coordinating with our farm chef, interacting with customers, and building community through food. You’ll find yourself swapping cooking tips with customers, setting aside those special pints of the first strawberries for the neighbor kid who can’t enough of them, and forming strong bonds with the community. Friday evenings in the summer will be about large communal gatherings with wood-fired pizza and lots of kombucha, beer, and wine. Summer u-pick, Fall pumpkin patch, Holiday night markets, and other events will allow ample opportunity to have large groups of people visit the farm and store. All of this in a worker-owned cooperative situated on a beautiful and vibrant farm...

The job involves a wide range of tasks in a dynamic and ever-changing environment; high-level strategy and business development plus a healthy dose of hands-on work on all aspects of operating and staffing a grocery store. Along with your fellow co-manager, you will be responsible for hiring, training and developing staff for growth and succession planning. The ideal candidate is both self-directed and collaborative, brings deep management and leadership experience preferably from the food retail industry, has a successful track record meeting and exceeding financial goals, and can create a culture of trust, teamwork and fun!

If you are hankering for something more meaningful, come join us as we collectively create a whole new food culture - one that is based on authentic relationships and treats people, animals, and soil with the respect they deserve. One that puts food on our table.
